ADVANTAGEHEALTH CORPORATION AND ALLIANZ LIFE EARN TWO AWARDS FROM THE AMERICAN HEART ASSOCIATION

Minneapolis, MN – September, 2009 AdvantageHealth Corporation and Minneapolis-based Allianz Life Insurance Company are proud to have been awarded the Gold Level Start! Fit-Friendly Company award for their TotalLife program by the American Heart Association. They also received a Worksite Innovation award for their Skyscraper Challenge program, an incentive program that was offered earlier in 2009 to all Allianz employees. The Total Life Fitness Center at the Allianz Life campus houses more than 7,500 square feet of state-of-the-art strength training and cardiovascular equipment, in addition to a 1,600 square foot group exercise studio. AdvantageHealth provides on-site staffing for the Total Fitness Center and facilitates an array of healthy lifestyle programs that are available to Allianz Life's more than 2,000 employees.

Wellness Program staff member Amy LaRue says, "Winning both awards was a surprise, as this is the first year Allianz applied for the awards from the American Heart Association. Hats off to the wellness staff and Allianz employees! As a result of winning both awards, Allianz will receive two separate plaques for these accomplishments and the AHA has a special feature in the September 28th issue of Fortune Magazine highlighting the awards and recipients. Our executive leader will also receive an official recognition letter. What an honor!"
